Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Tuesday 23 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Becoming cooler and unsettled from midweek.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rain in the northwest, heavy on hills, moving gradually southwards. Mild for many in England and Wales but northern parts turning colder with showers arriving in the NW.

Wednesday:
Cloudy in south with a little light rain or drizzle but brighter to the north with some blustery showers for Scotland, Northern Ireland and perhaps northern England.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Rather cloudy Thursday, some rain. Much colder on Friday with frequent heavy showers, wintry in the northwest. Showers in the north Saturday, else fine with sunny spells and less cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.